AUG/16

THE
EDITION

DEAR ALUMNI,

It is a great privilege for me to read about your accomplishments, highlighted here in the pages of Class Notes. After graduation, you took different paths throughout the world, achieving professional goals, performing high-level public service, and adding new members to your family. You are shining examples of the values we champion here at MCLA, and I thank you for sending your news back to your alma mater.

Mary F. Hastings and MCLA President James F. Birge.

I have some news to share as well. This summer, Mary F. Hastings joined us as the vice president of institutional advancement. Her experience in development and fundraising, as well as her roots in the northern Berkshires, make her ideally suited to lead MCLA's Office of Institutional Advancement.

Before serving as executive director of the American London Symphony Orchestra Foundation, Mary served as acting chief development officer for The Boys' Club of New York; director of development for The New School for Jazz and Contemporary Music and The New School for Drama; director of special events for The Foundation for Jewish Culture, and director of education and community outreach at the Bloomingdale School of Music.

Mary is also deeply familiar with values and principles in higher education. A professional trumpeter, she has served on the faculty of Queens College and Hunter College. She continues to teach trumpet and is an active Broadway and classical music performer.

The accolades MCLA has received in recent years place the College in an excellent position for further development and recognition, and I am proud to have Mary help lead those efforts. I encourage you to come back to MCLA for Reunion, October 14–16, 2016, or to attend one of our regional alumni events. You will be able to meet Mary, connect with old friends, and make new ones, too.

With best wishes from all of us here at MCLA.

Sincerely,

James F. Birge, Ph.D.
President

DEAR ALUMNI,

For the past two years, it has been my great privilege to serve as president of the Alumni Association Board of Directors. After serving as vice president for two years, I was honored to be elected as president and help the board move to a broader mission in serving the college's most valuable assets — our current students and talented alumni.

The role of the board continues to evolve, and we are constantly looking for new, energetic members to support the students and the alumni community in a variety of ways. Our members work to support students through participation at career fairs, scholarships, mentoring, class engagement, alumni reunions, and, of course, fundraising in support of College initiatives and unrestricted scholarship aid for current students.

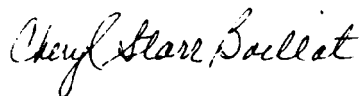

My involvement with the College has continued to grow since I was first elected to the board seven years ago. My husband and I believe in the value of education and service to the community and, as part of that, have set up an endowed scholarship fund in memory of my mother, Norma Lorell Starr, to benefit future teachers. As an educator myself at North Adams public schools, I continue to see the needs of all students and the importance of supporting the College's commitment to making a degree economically possible for all who seek it.

I encourage you to engage with our amazing students through athletic events, mentoring programs, reunion events, and alumni-supported activities. I know you will find it as rewarding and worthwhile as I have.

MCLA students have made the right choice to start here, and it is important that we support them on their path to becoming amazing alumni with promising and successful futures like those featured in this edition.

As a proud member of the MCLA alumni community, I am asking you to consider how you can get involved. Please visit our alumni website at alumni.mcla.edu, contact Christine Naughton, director of alumni relations and development at 413-662-5074 to consider running for election to the Alumni Association Board of Directors, or sign up as a class agent. And, please, always give whatever you can to the Alumni Fund in support of student scholarship aid. Current students need you today to support their tomorrow.

Sincerely,

Cheryl Starr Boillat, '79, M.Ed. '97

ALUMNI GO THE DISTANCE...

but Always Have a Home at MCLA

Countless paths lead from MCLA out into the world, some well-trodden, others more obscure, many more yet to be discovered. Each year, a fresh crop of graduates choose their paths to a bright, rewarding future. No matter which path they choose, how far it leads, or what unexpected turns they may take, these grads will always have a home at MCLA.

"IT MIGHT JUST BE YOUR ELECTIVES THAT UNLOCK THE DOOR TO A FUTURE BETTER THAN YOU COULD'VE IMAGINED." –Valerie Ugrinow '02

VALERIE UGRINOW '02, a native of central Massachusetts, journeyed to California shortly after leaving MCLA. With a degree in psychology, she conducted clinical work and research at group homes and hospitals. Although happy to help others, Ugrinow wasn't quite content. "Something was missing," she recalls. "I wanted a more direct impact and larger reach."

While at MCLA, Ugrinow had taken yoga as an elective. Remembering how the course made her feel, she started practicing yoga more frequently. "I was better able to help others when I took care of myself first," she discovered.

This revelation led to a change in direction. "I went from wanting to help others feel better to wanting to help others be in a place to help others," Ugrinow explains. "I realized that becoming a yoga instructor would give me that larger reach I had been looking for in a pay-it-forward kind of way."

Today, as an instructor at Yoga Six California, Ugrinow is grateful for her first exposure to yoga back at MCLA and encourages others to be open-minded in choosing electives. "It might just be your electives that unlock the door to a future better than you could've imagined," she advises.

MICHELLE KIRBY '90, originally from Massachusetts' South Coast region, was an English/communications major on the path to becoming a radio personality, but experiences at MCLA revealed a world of other possibilities. Her biggest epiphany came in 1988, when she spent a semester in Spain as part of the study abroad program. "It made me realize how big the world is and how many places, people, and opportunities exist," she explains. "It broadened my world and helped foster the courageous spirit inside me."

After graduating, Kirby relocated to Seattle, Wash., where she interned at a radio rock station, waitressing and bartending to pay the rent. When she began to feel frustrated, she booked a Baja California Sur vacation through Green Tortoise Adventure Travel. "I had a you-only-live-once realization on that trip," she says. "What really made me happy was adventure and travel. I didn't need a career to make me happy."

Kirby went to work for Green Tortoise, where she met her husband, Andy Hammerman. The two eventually embarked on a backpacking adventure through Central and South America, during which they "fell in love with a tiny little farming village, Chugchilán, perched at 10,500 feet in the Andes Mountains."

The couple returned to the U.S. with a dream of purchasing land in that little village, and that's just what they did. In 1994, they relocated to Chugchilán and built The Black Sheep Inn, an internationally acclaimed, award-winning ecolodge offering an "off the beaten path" experience in rural Ecuador. Through volunteerism and philanthropy, Kirby and Hammerman have become integral members of their community. Kirby has volunteered as an English teacher for 19 years, and they have recently supported humanitarian relief efforts following the April 2016 earthquake in Ecuador.

"MCLA CONTINUES TO BE A PART OF MY LIFE, AND I LOVE IT!"

—Michelle Kirby '90

In 2005, The Black Sheep Inn was honored with Smithsonian Magazine's Tourism Cares for Tomorrow Sustainable Tourism Award. Kirby was touched to receive a note at that time from MCLA President Emerita Mary K. Grant '83, telling her how proud she had made the MCLA community. "MCLA continues to be a part of my life," she says, "and I love it!"

Although distance makes it difficult to visit regularly, both Ugrinow and Kirby have maintained contact with MCLA. Ugrinow hopes to participate in this year's Reunion Weekend soccer game. Kirby is grateful for the Internet for enabling her to feel "at home," even from "another hemisphere."

Each year MCLA offers courses that incorporate international or domestic travel away from campus. Each course creates a unique experiential and immersive setting that lends itself to significant learning related to students' majors or more broadly to their liberal arts education. These "travel courses" allow students to experience other societies, cultures, and ecosystems without the larger time and financial investment of a semester-long study abroad program, which many MCLA students find challenging to incorporate into their educational experiences. The travel component of these courses typically occurs over 7-10 days at spring break allowing students to remain in-residence and complete other coursework at MCLA during the spring term. Destinations include China, Ireland, England, France, Spain, Japan, Hawaii, Florida's Everglades, Peru, and St. Thomas.

These travel courses provide enormous benefits in areas such as intercultural learning, collaboration, undergraduate research, and writing-intensive assignments. By participating in these courses, students not only develop academically but personally. Students learn to navigate situations, cultures, languages, and locations that are completely new to them. Students regularly report that seeing significant cultural, historical, and ecological locations allows them to make connections and deeper applications and insight to their classroom learning.

While faculty strive to make these travel courses accessible to students, the additional financial costs to participate still prove to be a barrier for many students. Student scholarship aid continues to be the College's area of greatest need. If you would like to help make opportunities like these available to today's students, please consider supporting the MCLA Travel Course Scholarship Fund using the enclosed envelope or by visiting give2.mcla.edu.
